BARNABEE SAVED FROM FREEZING TO DEATH

County Officials Returning From a Raid Find Him Laying On Ice On Greenland Road.

Sheriff Spinney, County Solicitor James Bennett and Zella Allen, and they were brought to this jail and will be arraigned today on a statutory charge. On the way back from Newmarket they did not find liquor, they did not they rescued Frank Barnabee from freezing to death. They found Barnabee layed out on the ice along side of the Greenland road, some distance this side of the Bragdon farm. He was dead to the world, and if he had not been discovered, his frozen body would have been found the next morning, as it was not over ten above zero. Barnabee as far as can be learned, had been drinking and had started for Greenland where he is employed as a farm hand, on the last car, and had either got off or been put off the car, and slipping on the ice fell down and was too drunk to get up. He was brought in to the police station and thawed out and kept over night.

MAN DRAWS KNIFE ON THREE WOMEN AT DOVER

Their Screams Bring Help, But Assailant Is Frightened Away

Dover, Jan. 21.—Flashing a long-bladed knife in the faces of three young women on Hough street about 10 last night as they were on their way to their homes from the shopping district.

During the excitement that followed the elder woman, Mrs. Robert Taylor was stabbed and is now under the care of a physician at her home. The wound is said to be dangerous.

The police were not notified until some time later. Following the description given by the women however, Bert Farrell, aged 30, of Somersworth, was arrested at 3:30 this morning by Somersworth officers, for officers Brownell and Seaton of this city.

He was brought here to face the charges tomorrow morning of assault and attempted highway robbery. At the time of the alleged holdup Mrs. Taylor, her sister in law, Miss Cora Taylor, and Miss Marion Sanders of Oak street were approaching a lighted corner when a man blocked their way and said in a low tone, at the same time flourishing his knife, "It is money I want, and I want it quick."

Miss Sanders sprang forward in an attempt to get away, but the man seized her and choked her. She managed to release his hold and run.

He then turned on Mrs. Taylor and used his knife, inflicting a long gash on the abdomen. The women's screams aroused the residents on the street, who ran out to the women. Their assailant took flight before he secured any money it is said.

LONG FIGHT WITH MANIAC TO SAVE HER BOYS

Brooklyn Woman Attacked by Servant With Razor and Knife

New York, Jan. 21.—In a desperate effort to prevent the murder of herself and two children, Mrs. Robert E. Voll of Flatbush battled more than 10 hours until early today with a mad woman servant armed with a razor and a carving knife. Not until the arrival of the police reserves was the girl overpowered and taken to the Kings County hospital, where she died shortly afterward.

That Mrs. Voll and her children escaped serious injury is due only to the heroic fight that she put up against the delirious woman. During the entire time that the fight lasted the mother screamed for help and her cries were added to by the frightened children, but their yells were not heard outside their house.

Mrs. Voll is the wife of a hotel proprietor. They have two sons, Robert, 13 years old, and William 11. During the struggle Voll was in this hotel only 100 yards away, ignorant of what was happening in his home. The servant had been in the employ of the Voll family only two weeks. She had often acted suspiciously. Last night she suddenly began screaming and declared she was going to jump from the roof.

Mrs. Voll after dragging her from the roof, went to the kitchen to make a hot drink. When she returned to the dining room the servant was flourishing a large carving knife over the heads of the boys and telling them she was going to kill them.

Dropping the glass, Mrs. Voll rushed to her children and dragged them to the opposite side of the table. This appear to enrage the servant, and seeing Mr. Voll's razor on a sideboard nearby, she grabbed this and with both knife and razor ran at Mrs. Voll and the boys.

Mrs. Voll pushed the children behind her and grabbed the mad servant's wrists. The two women struggled about the room, Mrs. Voll trying to make the servant release the weapons. The boys huddled in a corner and screamed hysterically, too terrified to call their father by telephone.

After a "me the servant succeeded in wrestling herself loose from Mrs. Voll and made for an adjoining room which was used by Mr. Voll as a den and where he kept a number of guns and revolvers used in hunting expeditions. Mrs. Voll again rushed at the servant and catching her by the wrist, tried to overpower her. The strength of the insane woman was too much for Mrs. Voll, however, and she was unable to get the sharp weapon. She did succeed in throwing the servant to the floor, and there the two women rolled about struggling.

In this way they battled nearly two hours, when the servant suddenly became quiet. Although hardly able to get to her feet, Mrs. Voll succeeded in getting the insane woman into an outside room and then locked the door on her. Hardly had she accomplished that when the woman again became violent and attempted to batter down the door.

Mrs. Voll managed to crawl to the telephone and call her husband, who rushed to the house. He at once called for police, who arrived just as the maddened woman succeeded in breaking down the door.

Four policemen jumped at the woman, and, throwing her to the floor, sat on her while others telephoned for an ambulance. Dr. Southwick put a strait jacket on the woman and she was hurried to the hospital and placed in the observation ward. The doctors were unable to quiet the woman, and she died in a short time.

Among the woman's possessions at the Voll home, are several insurance policies on her husband's life. When the woman applied at the Voll house for employment she gave the name of Mrs. Jennie Bryne.

REMARKABLE FEAT OF A MARINE SWIMS TO SAFETY WITH BROKEN LEG

Swimming with right leg broken in two places and the other badly injured was the remarkable feat performed by Corporal Sinder a marine attached to the navy yard barracks on Saturday afternoon.

Sinders slipped on some ice at the edge of the wharf of John H. Broughton, fell fifteen feet into the water. In the fall he struck a floating stage which had moved away from its usual place. His right leg was broken in two places before he disappeared below the surface.

Being an excellent swimmer he managed to keep his head above water after coming up and put out for the float a short distance away. With the broken limb he crawled upon the stage where he held on to a beam and began crying for help. His cries attracted the crew on the government ferry 132 who with the watchman at the landing hurried to the injured man. To get at him the fireman, Clinton Tucker was obliged to climb down a piling to get on the float. The man was crying awfully with pain and it made a hard job to land him on the wharf.

Finally a rope was made fast to his body and watchman O'Leary and Capt. Locke managed to get him up. He was removed to the navy yard ferry 132 and hurried across the river to the hospital. Today it is reported that the left leg is broken and that the man is injured internally from the fall.

CHILD IS BADLY SCALDED BY FALL INTO TUB OF HOT WATER

Joseph Rossi of Green street, was badly scalded on Saturday afternoon. The child, who is less than two years of age, was moving about the kitchen where the mother had left a tub of hot wash water on the floor. The young child, unable to walk very much, started to go across the room, staggered and went splashing into the tub backwards. Before its cries could be heard it was terribly burned about the back and legs. The attending physician, Dr. W. O. Jenkins says there will be no serious results from the accident though the child is passing through a lot of suffering.

After the horse had been taken out of the sleigh and his harness adjusted the owner of the team arrived on the

LOST HIS GRIP

A traveling man lost his grip in the waiting room of the Boston and Maine railroad this morning. He went into the telephone booth to telephone, leaving the grip outside of the booth. To police Seymour he said that he was a salesman for an undertaker's supply house and whoever had taken the grip would find nothing of value or usefulness. He later left on the Boston train.

Interesting Items Gleaned from Near-by Places

The two story dwelling house of Horace French on the Epping road is a total loss by fire, the flames having done their destructive work Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. The alarm was rung in from box 62 and the steamer and hose wagons responded as quickly as possible. However, owing to the distance, fully two miles, the blaze was beyond control when the men arrived. The nearest hydrant is about half a mile from the house, and when the hose was put into working order it parted and the stream was delayed. All of the furniture was saved and was gotten out by volunteer firemen, Col. R. C. Stevens and Albert S. Wetherill, Jr., being among the first there. There was no insurance. After the fire became too hot to work the volunteers were obliged to await the arrival of the firemen. The house was owned by Horace French, but was occupied by his brother Harmon and family. Mr. French's wife is unable to walk and was removed to safety in a nearby house by Mrs. William E. Moore. The Eagle steamer and all other apparatus had a hard and long pull to the scene and the trip had to be made by the way of Front street.

All live stock which Mr. French owned was in the barn nearby and was saved. One hundred hens were housed in one of the coops which adjoined the house, and these were shooed out by some of the small boys, but even then the fowls were prone to remain in their warm quarters. The loss is estimated at about $500. On May 23, 1908, Marion French's house was burned, and on this occasion in the lack of help, Mrs. French called her boy and crawled from the house.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Neat and Effective.

"Come, come, my friend. Didn't you read the notice in the elevator?"

"What notice?"

"No book agents are permitted to go through this building."

"But I'm not a book agent."

"You're not? What are you carrying the book around for?"

"Why, there's a statement in it that I want you to verify."

"What's the statement?"

"Here it is. Listen, please. 'It is too often true that men who may be otherwise intelligent conceal beneath a seeming antipathy for book sellers a pitiful ignorance of all forms of literature.'"

"Verify it! Certainly not! What's the price of your book? Dollar a half?"

"Here you are. Goodbye."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Only Way.

"I refused his face seven times," said the manager, "and he still kept turning up with it, rewritten here and there."

"The eighth time he came I told him firmly it was no use."

"But," he said, "is there no possible way you could put my face on the stage?"

"Well," said I, "there's one way, but I don't know if you'd submit."

"Oh, I'd submit!" he cried. "I'd submit to anything!"

"Then," said I, "we'll grind it up and use it as a snowstorm."—Los Angeles Times.

A Proof.

"There are no miracles in this age," said the cynic.

"Oh, yes, there are," said the woman.

"Of course you credulous women believe fables, but did you ever know of a miracle happening yourself?"

"Certainly," replied the woman.

"Only this morning when I asked my husband for some money he gave it to me without asking what I wanted to do with it."—Baltimore American.

Impossible Politics.

"Would you vote for your husband if he ran for office?" asked Mrs. Barling-Bannors.

"Of course," replied the young suffragette. "But I don't think I'd care to have a lot of other women trying to flatter him by voting for him."—Washington Post.

Too Inquisitive.

"What did you go into the civil service examination for?"

"Just to show that I could pass it."

"Did you pass it?"

"Sag, what's the matter with you, anyway? Why do you ask so many fool questions?"—Buffalo Express.

A Parent's Pride.

"Your boy was just a little—er—wild when he was at college, wasn't he?"

"Oh, yes, he generally was a little wild at first. Couldn't get 'em over the plate, you know. But he always steadied down before the game was over."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

IN THE REALM OF FASHION

Chafing Dish Apron.

The chafing dish apron here shown is notable for the arrangement of its shoulder straps which are mere continuations of the lace and ribbon run heading outlining its pointed front.

The straps cross, each other at the waist line in front and are each reinforced by an additional row of the lace.

RIBBON AND BOWS APRON.

edging and finished with pointed ends, each adorned with a bow of ribbon. The waist band is of ribbon under val lace. Double rows of this lace edge the apron.

Downstitched swiss was the material chosen for this dainty conceit, and ribbon bows and ties added the finishing touch of coquettishness.

The New Train.

What at first sight looks very much like the old fashioned waltz train is a feature of many of the season's evening gowns. For want of a better name, many dressmakers are indeed calling the new separate trains, which are coming from the center of the back high up between the shoulders, waltz trains. The attraction of the new train, from the practical woman's point of view, is that it can be easily picked up and carried over the wearer's arm.

Rich Fabrics.

This is the season of elaborate and costly materials. We have gone mad about tulle, satin, velvet and chiffon, metal effects and the rich and luxurious effects for which the decoration was responsible.

ADVANCE STYLES IN SPRING COATS.

Full Length Models Lead, but Shorter Ones Are Coming In.

In speaking of spring wraps the Dry Goods Economist says:

"The cut of the coats again shows the straight line from shoulder to hem. While there is no indication of any attempt to draw in the figure in any exaggerated way, the absence of fullness in the skirt gives the appearance of slenderness which is so essential."

The full length coat is considered the most practicable for the coming season, but manufacturers are working on some new models in three-quarter and seven-eighth lengths in cutaway effect, which they expect will be taken in the dressier models in silks, satins and chamoises.

The large easy fitting, sleeve is considered excellent for spring and is seen frequently in the utility coats. It is made somewhat similar to the regulation coat sleeve, outlining the arm to more or less extent. In automobile wraps the sleeves as well as the armhole are made somewhat larger and usually finished off with a deep turn-back cuff, some of which have buttons and straps so that they can be fastened close to the arm when taking long journeys.

In the evening wraps the sleeve is frequently cut in kimono shape, but set in at the shoulder or below the shoulder line, but the regulation kimono sleeve is seldom seen in the new lines. The full length sleeve is by far the most desirable, but some three-quarter and seven-eighth sleeves are to be found in the extremely dressy wraps.

The use of fagoting and fancy silk stitching is noted and makes a neat and effective trimming. Belts are much in evidence, and belt effects are also seen. These are largely of leather and suede in black and colors and in some cases of the material itself.

New Neck Bow.

The latest in neckwear is the extremely large bow of black or white plaited linings. Frequently both colors are used together, one veiling the other.

Trained Gowns.

Dressy afternoon gowns are made longer than they were last season, many showing the short train effect, while others just sweep the floor.

TOOK HORSE AND SLEIGH--
THROWN OUT AND ARRESTED

Henry Kennison of York is Now Charged With Horse Stealing--The Horse Was Stopped at New Castle Bridge.

Henry Kennison of York was arrested on Saturday evening by Deputy Sheriff Shaw, and he is held charged with the alleged larceny of a horse and sleigh the property of Edward Mansoff of Elliot.

Mrs. Manson drove into town Saturday evening and tied her horse in front of Paul's store on Market street. After doing her shopping she returned to find the horse gone. The police were notified and they traced it to Kittery, and arrested Kennison. It seems that Kennison started for home in the sleigh and in Kittery the horse ran away and overturned the sleigh and Kennison was thrown out. The horse then turned around and ran over to this city and continued down to the New Castle toll gate where he was stopped by Major Ulrich. Officer Philbrick later went after the horse and returned it to his owner.

FORE RIVER GETS A BATTLESHIP

Washington, Jan. 20.—Rear Admiral Francis T. Howles, U. S. N., retired, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, speaking up on the awarding of the contracts by the Navy Department for the construction of the two new dreadnoughts, said: "The ship that we are to build will be named the Nevada, and it will be approximately the same size and type as the Argentine Republic battleship Albatross, launched last September. Our contract price was $5,385,000, and the fact that about $2,000,000 of that amount will be expended in labor should be of interest. It would be impossible at the present time to state just when work will be begun on the new dreadnought. Usually three or four months are spent in collecting the materials before the keel is laid, however, and I can only state that the work will be pushed with a view to completing the work within the contract period of three years."

The Secretary of the Navy will sign contracts today for the construction of the new battleships Oklahoma and Nevada. The award for the construction of the former is made to the New York Shipbuilding Company of Camden, N. J. The amount bid in each case is within a few thousand dollars of $6,000,000 for hull and machinery. The Oklahoma is to be built for the installation of Curtiss turbines and the Nevada will be provided with reciprocating engines. These are the first two vessels to be built under the restriction imposed by Congress that the contractor shall comply with the eight-hour law. Secretary Meyer found it necessary before finally making the awards to secure from the Attorney General an interpretation of the law. The language of the law is, "that no part of this appropriation for the construction and machinery of battleships shall be expended for construction of any battleships by any person, firm, or corporation, which has not at the time of the commencement and during the construction of said vessels established an eight-hour work day for all employees, laborers and mechanics engaged, or to be engaged, in the construction of the vessels named herein." The Attorney General takes the ground that the contractor is required to observe the eight-hour day only in the work on the battleships for which he contracted and is not bound as to other work in his yard. Nor does the law as crystal and at the tip of the tongue extend to materials which he may buy from concerns who do not observe the eight-hour law.

NEW CASTLE

Not all the choicest terms of Whitler's "Snow-Bound" could describe the wild white beauty of the little island, and town during the past week, especially those days when the cold mist had congealed as it fell and every bush, shrub and tree was coated with a thick covering of ice clear work in his yard. Nor does the law as crystal and at the tip of the tongue of ice hung faintly, which reflected back the sun's rays like so many diamonds. One evening as I stood in one of the main roads and looked over the mantle vale, crystal trees, and even the fences were crystal. While viewed in the light of an electric lamp the effect was singularly beautiful and the thought came to me, O, Heaven be any more beautiful than this.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne D. Poole passed Sunday with relatives in Portsmouth.

Mr. John Grant of Portsmouth was calling on Mr. and Mrs. Jotham Emery Sunday.

Preparations are being made for the K. of P. fair Feb. 13, 14 and 15.

Miss Beatrice Clark, after a brief visit with Mrs. Clara Hall, has returned to her home in Lawrence.

Death is impartial, place, season, business or age are each and all in effective barriers. Thou hast all seasons for thine own Oh, death is as inevitable now as when Mrs. Hemans penned the strong line. Again has the Angel of Death visited the home and taken our neighbor Mrs. Hannah Manson. Some day we shall know why dear ones that we love are taken from us to join the heavenly hosts above, while we are left with saddened hearts and tearful eyes. In God's good time we'll know it all some day, by and bye.

PAPE'S DIAEPSIN
FOR A BAD STOMACH

No Dyspepsia, Gas, Heartburn or Indigestion in Five Minutes

If you had some Diaepsin handy and would take a little now your stomach distress or indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out of order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diaepsin and take a little just as soon as can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diaepsin is a certain cure for out of order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store waiting for you.

These large 50 cent cases of Pape's Diaepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

GOVERNOR BASS TAKES A BRIDE

Brilliant Ceremony at the Home of the Bride at Walpole.

At "Edean," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird at East Walpole, Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Miss Edith Harlan Bird became the bride of Robert Perkins Bass, Governor of New Hampshire.

The entire interior of the house had been transformed by the decorations. The electrical fixtures had been removed and candles supplied the light.

The large music room had been made into a chapel, the walls of which were hung with rich velvet of royal purple and gold. An aisle through the center of the room was marked by white columns, surmounted with delicate pink roses and fragrant white lilac. Royal purple cords of silk marked the seats, which were individual gold chairs.

At the end of the room a prie-dieu was erected for the bridal party. On either side were tall candelabras of bronze with many candles.

Behind hung an exquisite piece of old Flemish tapestry.

The music was under the direction of Mr. Loefler Prof Snow, organist of the Church of the Advent in Boston, was at the organ and the members of the vested choir of the same church rendered several selections.

The bridal party was preceded by the choir as it entered the chapel. The processional hymn was "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden." The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Her gown was of heavy white duchess satin, en traine, draped with chiffon. The bodice was of hand-made Limerick lace, embroidered with pearls. The veil, too, was of Limerick lace.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Louis Agassiz Shaw, sister of the bride, was gowned in rich cream velvet trimmed with Venetian lace and wore a girde of grillants and pearls.

The best man was John T. Bass of Chicago, brother of the groom. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. Edward M. Parker, coadjutor bishop of the Episcopal diocese of New Hampshire, assisted by Rev. James Thompson, rector of the Church of the Epiphany at Walpole.

During the service the choir rendered "Lead Thy Blessing" and "God's Blessing Beams Upon You." As the bridal procession left the chapel they sang "How Welcome Was the Gull."

During the reception Governor and Mrs. Bass were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Bird, parents of the bride, and Mrs. Robert P. Bass, mother of the groom.

The ushers were Francis W. Bird, collector of the port of New York, and Charles S. Bird, Jr., brothers of the bride; George Dutton of New York, Percy H. Clark and the members of Gov. Bass' staff.

The New Hampshire guests were T. H. Wolahan, stenographer to Gov. Bass; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Burroughs, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Manning, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Faulkner, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Hollis, insurance, while the other $30,000 is divided among the various tenants who had rented stores or offices in other parts of the building.

Late Friday night the employees of the theatre gave a complimentary banquet at the theatre to Manager Heckman, who has just been transferred to New York. After the party broke up, about 1:30 a.m., John Pecker and Murray Peaslee returned to the theatre for an overcoat and discovered a small fire in the basement, which they extinguished with the high-pressure hose.

It is believed, however, that the blaze kept smouldering until, about two hours later, it was again discovered by two policemen. One of the officers rang an alarm just as the flames broke through the theatre roof.

Two firemen, Millard Fuller and Orloff Hammer, who were fighting the flames in the gallery, were knocked down when an explosion of hot air blew off an exit door. Both men were painfully burned about the head and face.

Stage Manager Kelley of the theatre staff waded and swam across the water-filled cellar and shut off the gas meter, probably preventing an explosion.

The building was owned by the Haverhill Real Estate Improvement Company, and the theatre was leased to the H. William Smith Amusement Company of White Plains, N. Y.

BITS OF SPORT

W. A. Gove, principal owner of the Rockingham Park property at Salem, will lose no time in accepting the grand circuit dates that were forfeited by the New York promoters of harness racing. Rockingham Park was an applicant for the work of racing that was eventually allotted to New York. The racing will be conducted in connection with a big agricultural fair. It will open Aug. 20 and continue through the week. After the Rockingham meeting the horses will have a short ship to Readville for the following week and then on to Hartford making three weeks of grand circuit racing for New England for the first time since Narragansett Park track at Providence dropped out of the grand circuit chain several years ago.

FIVE BIG FEATURES

With the issue of The New York World for Sunday, Feb. 4—one week from next Sunday. First, there will be the James Montgomery Flagg series of full page pen drawings entitled "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb," a new series of Charles Dickens characters in full page form, drawn by the famous Charles Dana Gibson; a new Sherlock Holmes story by Sir A. Conan Doyle; an eight page fashion sheet in color, and a sixteen page Joke Book with colored covers. As they used to say in the circus, "Hish is that for high?" Don't forget the complete Joke Book NEXT Sunday.

They say "No News is good news," but that doesn't go in The Herald office.

VETERAN RAILWAY
MAIL CLERK

Joseph Cheever may justly claim to being the veteran railway mail clerk of this section, and many of the younger clerks readily recall the assistance rendered them in their early days by him.

He was born in this city, Dec. 5, 1842, the son of Benjamin and Mary Holbrook Cheever. His early education was acquired at the Portsmouth Academy under Principals Israel P. Kimball and John P. Payson. On leaving school he entered the employ of his father, who conducted a clothing store on Market street. After acquiring knowledge of the business, in company with Josiah T. Brown, he bought out his father and conducted it up to the time of receiving his appointment to the railway mail service.

On his birthday, Dec. 5, 1872, he received his appointment to succeed John J. Leavitt of Hampton. His first run was between Boston and Portland, and then he was assigned to the long run between Boston and Bangor, leaving Boston on the night Pullman at 7 and returning two days later on the early morning train. He continued on this run for about a quarter of a century and then he was assigned to the run between Boston and North Conway, running on the same up to within a few years, when he was transferred to the run between this city and Concord.

During the long term, Mr. Cheever has never met with an accident by derailment, although he states that it was no uncommon occurrence for the morning express to leave the iron before the track was straightened near Elliot. Late in the Fall he was injured at Hadding by being struck by a heavy mail pouch, and since then has been off duty, but expects to resume his run soon.

Mr. Cheever makes his home in the historic Standley tavern on Daniel street, which in Colonial times was the home of Elijah Hall, who was Lieutenant with Capt. John Paul Jones on the Ranger. The house contains many articles of the early period that have been handed down through successive generations of the Cheever family and are highly prized by the owner. Among these is a chair taken by Capt. Thomas Shaw who commanded the privateers Portsmouth from a British ship which contained the household effects of the Governor of Halifax.

He married Miss Ella J. Murphy on July 8, 1869, who died several years ago. Two sons were born, John, who is engaged in the drug business at Arlington Heights and Rev. Ralph Cheever, pastor of the Unitarian church of Stoneham, Mass.

Mr. Cheever is a member of St. Andrew's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Washington Chapter, R. A. M., Laveport Council, De Witt Clinton Commandery, Knights Templar and a 32d degree Scottish Rite Mason.

The Boston Traveler says: The condition of railroad business in this country may be judged from the fact that during the past few months 140,000 men have been laid off permanently by the railroads of the country, out of a total of 1,750,000 employed.

Portsmouth loses thousands of dollars every year through fake stock promoters crooked peddlers and other schemes. In this regard we are no more exposed than any other city in the state. But we consider the city is fortunate in having a Board of Trade with decision enough to stand up in its boots and place the seal of disapproval on advertising that does not pay.

The Boston Post notes that Judge William L. Putnam of the United States Circuit Court is the oldest judge on the bench, and at the same time holds the record for efficiency. During the past decade he handled down 305 opinions which is as much as all the judges in the Massachusetts circuit handled down together. Judge Edgar Aldrich of New Hampshire stands second with a record of 80.

The Portsmouth city government has adopted resolutions against the threatened abandonment of the Kittery navy yard. Entirely apart from sentimental grounds and entirely apart from the blow the abandonment would be to Portsmouth, it seems to be the height of folly from an economical standpoint for the government to carry out Secretary Meyer's plan. An efficient yard can be maintained there at a title of the cost for accommodations that it can be done at New York or could be done at Newport, and the water way advantages are the best. Mr. Secretary von Meyer should get right down from any such hobby horse.

In olden times our forefathers thought it to be prudent and saving. That is when they were young and able to work they used to think of the future and save up money to have on hand for the day when they had grown old and were unable to do a day's work. That was a wise plan, too, but it is now called an old fashioned notion by those who try to keep step with the lively spirit of today. A man who evinces a saving disposition nowadays is looked on as a miser, a tightwad, and is subject to the anxious concern of his friends. They urge him to loosen up and be a come on like themselves. It is true that most everyone now is depending on some form of pension or relief to carry them along when they are all in. Sometimes they get what they expect and sometimes they don't. But the man who saves up often has occasion to thank his lucky stars that he overcame the temptation to spend as he went along when he was in good health.

BIRD'S EYE VIEWS

A man of long experience in politics would have shown more caution than Mr. Wilson did in inviting a candidate with Wallersteinian aspirations.

Some philosophic fortitude may be required, but a large number of emigrants and substantial democrats will have to learn to be happy though boomless.

It is but a coincidence. But as soon as Bryan shook hands with him Woodrow Wilson began to have trouble with the rest of the democracy.

The Eskimos are not an enlightened people. Yet they show great wisdom in the way they avoid north pole controversies.

Some of the booms may be compelled to substitute the steam whistles for the steam roller.

The success of various men in the beef business is the more surprising when court procedure calls attention to their lack of information concerning some of its most important practical details.

Long ago it was customary to boast of the size of the campaign fund a candidate could command. Now there is a disposition to direct the discussion toward other topics.

Cuba will remember from personal experience that Uncle Sam can take some very decisive steps on remarkably short notice.

The intrepid Mr. Hitecock dallies with alships and government ownership propositions with equal coolness.

Europe is developing a great demand for American automobiles. This may help to offset the outgo of American dollars in exchange for art treasures.

Charles W. Morse is now in a position to receive congratulations from associates who shared his penalty only to the extent of a scare and a narrow escape.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

Why Not Have Both?

The social workers who presented a petition to President Taft the other day asking that at least the price of a battleship be devoted to a careful inquiry into labor conditions in this country, echo an ever-growing dissatisfaction with big navy expenditures. Last week bids were opened for two new battleships the Oklahoma and the Nevada. For these the lowest bids were slightly under six millions of dollars each, exclusive of the cost of the monster guns and the second armament. About thirteen millions of dollars are thus to be expended on these two vessels, which may be out of date before they enter the water, and are destined to end their careers on the active list within ten years. That is, the navy plan is to keep battleships cruising for ten years as a part of the first line; for the next ten years they are to be carried in reserve and then they go to the scrap heap and the thirteen millions have disappeared, plus all the cost of operating and repairs. It is no wonder that people draw comparisons and ask themselves what such sums would do in this or that human cause. Very much less than six millions of dollars spent in the labor investigation desired might greatly improve the condition of working men and women throughout the United States and add enormously to the country's happiness and efficiency. Again, there are those who desire a congressional study of lawlessness and the failure properly to check and to punish crime. Others look at the untold millions in the South and think what thirteen millions would do down there to root out illiteracy and build colleges and schools. But the government continues to fling away its treasure on battleships. Admiral Dewey now wants four of them and some auxiliary boats every year or about $30,000,000 annually for new construction. — New York Evening Post.

Old Traditions.

The Archbishop of Canterbury rules that a British marriage ceremony is illegal when the bride does not promise to "obey." Thus beclings to the shadow when the substance has long since vanished. The matter is not likely to be tested in the courts. The word has often been omitted from the ceremony in English churches in recent years, with out material increasing the measure of wife's disobedience. The incident narrated in the special London dispatches to The Sunday Times scarcely relates to the modern Suffragette movement. Eighty years or more have elapsed since Mr. Bumble remarked that, if the law held that a man could control his wife's actions, the law was "a hazz." — New York Times.

Steam tug Wasp was sold at auction at New Castle on Monday by Maj. William H. Hackett, for the sum of $1,600. Capt. Rufus A. Preble of New Castle was the purchaser. Notwithstanding the severe storm a large company was present. We hope Capt. Preble will keep the Wasp for towage in our harbor. She is a substantial boat, and in his hands ought to do a good business.

The Boston Journal in an article condemning strikes says the Maine men here have resolved that they "will remain in the yard, and strike with the axe and the adze for the country once more."

The storm of Saturday of which we spoke yesterday, has prolonged itself far into Monday and at the time at which we write, (Monday night) promises to be continued like a story in the sensational papers, indefinitely.

organization has a wide interest. It seems evident that the scope of these popular measures needs to be wisely restricted to get the best results. There is a tendency to bring forward unwisely proposals for legislation, as was seen from the fact that in Oregon, where the initiative has been most often invoked only nine out of 32 proposals were adopted by the people two years ago.

The International Typographical Union last Spring had an experience with its working from which the organization has profited. Early in the year, on the initiative of the Sult Lake Typographical Union, a proposal relating to the method of computing payment for work done by typesetters was submitted to the membership of the International union. The proposal was adopted by a majority of more than 11,000. Later it was feared that the vote would precipitate unnecessary friction and a substitute proposal of a very different character was submitted to the membership and adopted by a majority of more than 19,000. Here was substantially a reversal of opinion.

To prevent further reconsideration, the International Typographical Union adopted a proposal providing that hereafter all amendments must be endorsed by 100 subordinate unions before the referendum is ordered. This check upon the working of the initiative and referendum undoubtedly is not unfair, for about the seventh of the membership still are secure a referendum. This is quite different from allowing a single union to precipitate action. One hundred endorsements is considered about 14 percent. In Oregon a petition for legislation must be endorsed by 8 percent of the voters. — Boston Globe.

Meddling With Cuba

There is nothing in the Platt amendment to justify American intervention in Cuba at the caprice of the President or the Secretary of State or of any representative of the United States in the island. Good and substantial reasons must exist for such action on the part of the United States. Even though Cuba is the weaker nation there are two sides to the treaty. It does not extinguish Cuban independence; it guarantees it. The moral obligation not to intervene except in case of actual necessity is to less binding than "the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence."

The readiness of the United States to interfere on any trivial pretext in the administration of the laws of

The Republican Senatorial Convention for District No. 1, will be held at the Franklin House in this city, this Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock.

The sons of New Hampshire in New York on Saturday evening, gave a public dinner at the Metropolitan Hotel to the officers of the 7th N. H. Regiment, now temporarily in that city. About one hundred and thirty persons sat down to the banquet. Charles A. Soule, Esq., presided and speeches were made by him; Lieut. Col. Abbott of the 7th, H. B. Perkins, Horace Greeley, Gen. Wm. Hall, Judge Charles A. Peabody, Judge Romney, and others. Col. Putnam, the commander of the regiment was unavoidably absent. The occasion was one of much enjoyment.

The Florida Legislature recently passed an act prohibiting the exportation of prisoners from that state.

Cuba or in its political campaigns is perhaps as likely to have the effect of inciting disorder as of forestalling trouble. If a body of political malcontents can secure advantages for itself by threatening the Government of the island and secure rewards for its members with the aid of the United States Government, it will not be encouraged to respect the law or keep the peace. It is not yet forgotten how, as a result of the last intervention of the United States in 1906, some of the least worthy insurgents were provided with offices and their followers allowed to keep property and horses they had stolen, an arrangement sanctioned by Mr. Taft, then Secretary of War.

Neither does intervention mean annexation. What Mr. Roosevelt said in 1905 about United States troops staying in Cuba the next time they were sent there, or what Mr. Taft may have thought about the probability of Cuba being annexed in case the United States again intervened, is a matter of secondary importance. No President of the United States can annex Cuba. It will not be annexed against the will of the people of the United States. They hold, as they did at the outbreak of the war with Spain, that "the people of Cuba are and of right ought to be free and independent," and that by that pledge the United States is bound. — The New York World.

Undesirable Aliens

While the Immigration bill presented by Senator Dillingham has many excellent features that give a promise of redress of existing evils, several points are decidedly objectionable. Chief among these may be cited the increase in the power of arbitrary deportation and the prohibition to any transportation company to solicit immigrants to come to America.

The arbitrary power of deporting immigrants is nominally vested in the President, but it will be exercised in fact by inspectors at the ports. Under this power it will be permissible to deport a man charged with being a "vagrant"—a word made use of by police to arrest men against whom no definite charge has been made and against whom no definite offense can be proved. Such powers vested and so exercised might result in the infliction of gross wrongs against innocent people. Law should be definite; when once it becomes arbitrary or uncertain it ceases to be law.

Less dangerous but still objectionable is the prohibition against all solicitation of immigrants by transportation companies. There is a great big country beyond the Rockies that needs labor, and if it does not come from Europe it will come from Asia. There is nothing in Atlantic coast experience to justify us in any policy of radical exclusion of honest labor from the country. In this also there is such a thing as being too drastic. — New York World.

Sensible Changes

President Taft was inaugurated in a weather accompaniment of snow and wind that spoiled the ceremonies and wrenched telegraph lines in Washington nearly isolated from the rest of the country. Ever since, there has been general demand for changing the comfortable for the celebrants. The matter has now found expression in a resolution favorably reported by the House Judiciary committee, fixing the last Thursday in April for inaugurating the President into office—a time when the Washington climate is nearly always balmy and delightful. Along with this reform, the resolution provides that the terms of congressmen shall begin the second Tuesday in January instead of March. This change is far more vital than the other. Apparently it would enable congressmen to assume their duties two months after election instead of waiting—as they are always forced to do unless the President calls for a special session—for fourteen months to carry into effect the will of the people. Such an innovation would be a simple and natural device for making the national Legislature more quickly responsive to popular demands, as are the legislative bodies of nearly all other nations. — Boston Traveler.

Unique Features of the Lawrence Strike

The Lawrence strike presents unique features that will give it place in labor annals. In the first place, the strike was not ordered by the regular organization of the textile workers, but is apparently the result of effort on the part of a new union to gain a footing among the textile workers of the East. This interesting organization, moreover, is under Socialistic control, and is led by imported agitators who are avowedly opposed to the present wage system. As the strike is not led by the recognized representatives of trade unionism, it is naturally accompanied by disorder and violence. The usual forces that may be relied upon to hold in check the riotous element in the ranks of labor are not present in this case. The strike is still further complicated by the fact that the workers themselves are a polyglot mob of Middle and Southern European aliens. In this respect the outbreak affords a sobering lesson to the dangerous policy of wholesale importations of the unassimilable and uncontrollable racial elements from the Old World.

The occasion for the strike was also unique. It arose out of a reduction of wages ordered by the manufacturers forced upon them by state law. The policy adopted by the companies in the respect was a new one and apparently unwise as well. Their action, however, draws attention to the fact that further reduction of the hours of labor in this state should not be ordered by the general court without the most careful investigation of the competitive conditions of industries affected. In general, finally the outbreak is a symptom of the underlying dissatisfaction with the increased cost of living. The rise of prices has not been adequately compensated by increase of wages, and has resulted in growing difficulty on the part of the wage earning and salary receiving classes to make family budgets balance properly. The labor troubles resulting from this cause are sure to increase in frequency and violence unless radical remedial measures are applied—that is, measures which go to the root of the difficulty which is the loss of the purchasing power of the money in which wages and salary are paid. — Boston Transcript.

PEOPLE'S FORUM DISCUSS SOCIALISM

Mr. James F. Carey of Haverhill Makes the Address.

Mr. James F. Carey of Haverhill, a well-known Socialist, was the speaker at the People's Forum at the Universalist church on Sunday evening, and he had for his subject, "Socialism," a subject upon which he is well qualified to talk.

His address was interesting and enlightening to his large audience for he went over the history of the party and dwelt at some length on its aims and on its wonderful growth through the country in the past few years.

BOWLING

A Busy Week With the Bowling Fans--Great Interest in Poehler-Christopher Match--Clerks Organizing Bowling Teams.

The bowling game in this city was never at such an interesting stage as at the present time, and the result has been the organization of a number of teams, and matches have been arranged for some time ahead. Paul Poehler has given the game a big boost in this section and his coming match with Christopher, which will be rolled at the Arcade alley on Monday evening of next week, will be the biggest bowling event ever pulled off in this state. There is a great demand for seats and a big crowd is assured.

The Press bowling team, that is five of the local pencil pushers, will roll the City Hall bowling team this evening at the Elks' alleys. If they win they may take on some other teams, but in all cases bowling averages must be submitted before the game is arranged. The Clerks of the Manufacturing department at the Navy Yard have the next call on the Press team.

Paul Poehler will go to Rochester this evening where he will roll an exhibition game with Harry Young, the owner of the Rochester alleys.

The bowling team of the N. H. Beane company since their bowling stunt of last week, have been flooded with challenges, and they have accepted one sent across the street by Bill Kershaw for the Hodgdon and Kershaw food manipulators. The match will be rolled in the near future and the date and place is a secret. It is understood that the other two clothing houses have a team waiting for the Beane team, if they survive the Hodgdon and Kershaw bunch.

The return match between Dover and Portsmouth will be rolled at the Arcade alleys on Tuesday evening, and the Dover team expect to make a better showing. The locals also expect to roll a better exhibition than in Dover, where they were decidedly off color.

Green's drug clerks have got up a team and they are out with a challenge to any other team of clerks on Market or Congress street.

The candlepin bowling team representing the clerks of the Accounting Department at the Navy Yard rolled their first match Saturday evening, defeating an All Star team. The pins were falling well for both teams and high scores were the rule. Paul of the All Stars was high total with 341, while Hildebrand had a single string, or 151.

The Accounting clerks would be pleased to hear from any team in this vicinity who think they understand the game. The score:

MRS. GOULD BUYS HUDSON

What Is More, She Intends to Drive It

New York, Jan. 22.—Mrs. Frank J. Gould has set the style in New York by driving her own motor car. In indications are that other women members of the "400" will accept the fashion set by Mrs. Gould and will become possessors of cars that they can drive themselves.

Mrs. Gould was one of the first visitors at the New York automobile show at Madison Square Garden. Within an hour she had investigated several of the leading cars at the show and before she departed she registered her name for a demonstration of the new Self-Starting Hudson "30."

Before the New York automobile show had come to a close Mrs. Gould had become owner of the car. The last day of the show delivery of the car was made to Mrs. Gould and as quickly as wintry blasts give way, the first member of New York's smart set to drive her own car will be setting a notable example to her sisters.

P. M. Robinson, E. M. Fisher, P. M. Flanagan and P. A. Gray have already purchased the Hudson Self-Starting "30."

If you want a car consult P. A. Gray, local agent for the Hudson.

ROYAL VISITORS DUE TO REACH NEW YORK TODAY

Reids to Entertain Governor General of Canada Four Days

New York, Jan. 21.—The arrival here tomorrow of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught will mark the first visit by British royalty to New York city since 52 years ago, when the then Prince of Wales, who was the late King Edward VII., came here and traveled from New York to the West. New Yorkers have prepared to extend a welcome befitting such royal guests.

Whitelaw Reid, ambassador to the Court of St. James, who, with Mrs. Reid, will act as host and hostess, will be at the Grand Central station to meet the party. They will arrive aboard the duke's private car, Corn wall and York, attached to the regular train which is due at 7.26 a. m.

Beside the duke, who is Governor General of Canada, and uncle of King George V., and the duchess, the party will include their 25 year old daughter, Princess Patricia; Miss Pelley, one of the ladies in waiting at the Government House, Ottawa; among those said to have been in Lieut. Col. Lowther, military secretary to the duke, and Capt. Rivers-Bulkeley, controller of the vice royal household.

The party will be driven directly to Ambassador Reid's home at 451 Madison avenue, and remain here until Thursday afternoon.

The program is altogether a social one, for the visitors desire to avoid the round of public functions which would be necessary on an official visit to the United States.

The program, so far as it has been arranged, is as follows:

Monday noon—The Reids give a luncheon at their home, with the visitors and several New York friends as guests.

Monday afternoon—The first of several sightseeing tours about the city. Monday evening—A dinner at the Reid home, with Cardinal Farley, an old friend and neighbor of the Reids, as one of the guests invited to meet the royal visitors. This function will be informal and followed by a musical.

Tuesday afternoon—A luncheon and a sightseeing tour.

Tuesday evening—A formal dinner at the Reids, with several hundred New Yorkers invited to meet the royal guests, followed by a small dance. Bishop Greer of the New York diocese and several members of the families of Presidents Lincoln, Grant and Harrison, who are living here or not far from New York, are among those said to have been invited.

Wednesday—Program for the day not settled.

Wednesday evening—Dinner and musical at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills. Mr. Mills is a brother of Mrs. Reid.

Thursday afternoon—Departure for Ottawa.

More minute details of the program have been withheld because the visit is considered wholly private and personal.

Peacocks' Feathers.

Peacocks' feathers have been handed down to us from the ancient days of mythology as emblematic of treachery, evil and misfortune. The origin of this strange superstition is founded upon the following classical story: Ostris, king of Egypt, upon starting on his Indian expedition left his queen, Isis, regent, with Argus, his minister, as her chief adviser. Argus, with his hundred eyes, or, rather, his spies, soon made himself so formidable and powerful that he seized the queen regent, shut her up in a strong castle and proclaimed himself king of Egypt. Mercury was sent against him with a strong army, took him captive and cut off his head, whereupon Juno metamorphosed him into a peacock and set his spies in his tail. From this legend and the various additions made to it from time to time the belief has arisen that it is unlucky to have peacocks' feathers inside a house.

Fire Insurance Folks.

A young Englishwoman introduced a new phrase to a New Yorker the other day. She had been telling of her home town, of its extraordinary sanctimoniousness, until her hearer asked, "Why, what sort of folks live there?" "Oh," she said, "they're all fire insurance folks."

It didn't seem that any one community could be made up of people in one line of business, and the hearer asked for an explanation.

"Why," came the answer, "fire insurance folks are returned colonials who lived abroad and have committed every crime in the calendar. Then when they get old they come and try to square up by living six years of the most painful piety. That's why we call 'em fire insurance folks.'" New York Sun.

The turning up of political letters to plague the writers recalls the motto of a waste politician, "Never write to a man when you can go to see him and needn't talk when you can make signs."

A Serum Of Youth

A German Professor Gives His Reasons For Disapproving of His Use

By F. A. MITCHEL

"These American scientists," said Dr. Holwig-Schneberg, original investigator at the University of Bonn, "make me tired. I have just read an article copied from an American journal stating that one of them has discovered a method of preventing decay in living organisms, or rather of renewing the primary condition, which is the same thing. He has been experimenting on bacteria and from bacteria hopes to lead up to more complex organisms. Thirty years ago I began where he is beginning today and in ten years had reached a point where I was able indefinitely to perpetuate youth in human beings. 'You did that!' exclaimed Professor Schneberg, taking his pipe out of his mouth and looking through his spectacles at Dr. Holwig-Schneberg in astonishment.

"I did," replied the other.

"Why, then, did you not announce your discovery?"

"Because the only case I ever perfected demonstrated that it was best to interfere too radically with natural processes."

"You had an experience?"

"I had; one that admonished me to permit persons to grow old in the natural way."

"Do tell me about it; I am dying of curiosity."

"Well, I began just where this American began. I made cultures of bacteria, observed the cause of decay and hunted for a serum to prevent it. I failed in this, but discovered one that would kill the decaying bacteria for a certain period, and capable of continuing the process ad infinitum. I will not attempt to give you in a nutshell investigations extending over a period of ten years whereby I at last succeeded in applying my discovery to human beings. All I shall attempt to do now is to give you the principal reason why I did not announce my discovery to the world."

"When I had succeeded in keeping monkeys young and frisky by the next step was to try my serum on the next and highest type of animal life—man. I had received pecuniary support from my investigations from Baron Wobbel and, after trying two or three experiments on subjects, announced to him that I could keep a man at the same apparent age from the moment I began to treat him for an indefinite period. The baron was much interested and asked me many questions concerning my process—what danger there might be to the patient, my ability to continue it and what would be the result for him after my death. I satisfied him on most of these points, whereupon he told me that a countess, Herr Schoffenholer, enormously rich, was desirous of uniting his wealth to the baron's title. Herr Schoffenholer had a daughter aged twenty, and the baron had a son aged two. There were the only children born to either family. The only way to unite the wealth and the title was to marry these two. But the difference of age was an insurmountable difficulty."

"Now," said the baron to me, "if you can keep Fraulein Schoffenholer at her present age till my son is old enough to marry the two interests may be united."

"Here was a chance to try an experiment under favorable conditions. After numerous family councils at which a great deal of opposition was raised Herr Schoffenholer decided the matter by compelling his daughter to submit to my treatment. I was not informed of this compulsion or that the fraulein was in love with a young guardian, a few years her senior. Had I been I would not have consented to act in the manner."

"I began my treatment on the fraulein on Christmas day. She recovered admirably, and I saw at once went in to see the patient. Whether the latter had forgotten that the week of his captivity had expired or whether he feared the doctor would tell him he could go, he did not mention the matter. He continued to enjoy the attentions of madame, and since he received an order from St. Petersburg not to risk anything by being moved he remained passive and content.

Then one morning, instead of madame bringing him his breakfast, a servant brought it.

"Where is your mistress?" asked the count in a dissatisfied tone.

"Madame is indisposed this morning."

Madame was listening at the door.

"Ump!"

The servant set the breakfast down on a table beside the count and left him to eat alone. When the dishes were carried out madame was in the parlor to inspect them. She smiled at nothing that the breakfast was untouched.

At 11 o'clock the count sent a servant to Madame to ask after her and to express his disappointment that she would not be able to read to him. At 2 in the afternoon he sent another message, begging that she would make an effort to visit him if only for a few minutes; he was desperately lonely. Before dinner, which they had been accustomed to eat together, he sent word that if he could not have her company no dinner need be provided for him. At 10 in the evening he declared that if she did not come to bid him good night he would violate all rules of propriety and go to her. To this she sent word that she was better and would breakfast with him in the morning.

So the count, forced to go to bed without seeing her, fretted all night, and when in the morning he waited in his easy chair for her to bring his breakfast and saw her enter with the tray, as usual, he was beside himself with joy. Rising and setting the tray on the table, he took both her hands in his and carried them to his lips.

"My benefactress!" he exclaimed.

"Is it only gratitude that moves you?" she asked, lowering her eyes.

"Yes—no. It is both. I mean that I have become accustomed to your ministrations, cannot get on without them."

That was a happy breakfast. Madame said she felt much better than yesterday, but needed the air. She would ride out, but regretted that the count was not able to ride with her.

"But I am able!" cried the count, and, getting up from his chair, he pronounced around the room.

Madame looked sad. The count asked what was the matter.

"Since you are well," she said, "I must part."

"But," rejoined the count, putting his hand on his side, "the motion has brought on a terrible pain."

"I think," said madame, smiling, "that you are well enough to ride out, but any violent motion is still dangerous."

"Exactly," exclaimed the count, sinking into his chair, with an apology for a groan.

A pair of horses and a sleigh were ordered—for by this time the snow lay deep on the ground—and the two got in among a pile of fur robes and went for a drive.

That evening when madame and the count were sitting before a great open fireplace the count looked very sad.

"What troubles you?" asked madame.

"Something that must separate me from you," was the reply.

"And that something is?"

"You know of a custom with us here in Russia by which a woman who is not noble may marry a noble and thus acquire his title of nobility. Sometimes a wealthy woman will pay a handsome sum to an impecunious nobleman to marry her, the two parties, not to meet again, as soon as the ceremony has been performed. My hereditary estates came to me very much impoverished. Indeed, it was necessary that I should either raise 100,000 rubles to pay off the debt or lose them. At this time my eye caught an advertisement of a young girl who had just come into a large fortune for a husband with a title, she was to pay for the honor conferred upon her, the two to part immediately after the marriage. I opened negotiations with this woman, and the result was an agreement by which she was to pay 100,000 rubles and be my wife in name. So distasteful was the sale to me that I stipulated the ceremony should take place by proxy. I never saw my wife."

The count heaved a sigh at finishing his confession.

"What was the name of the girl you married?" asked madame.

"I have forgotten."

"Was it Marianne?"

The count started. "It was. What do you know of her?"

"She is very near to me."

"Near to you?"

"Yes; we are twins."

Madame arose and touched a bell. A servant came, whom she met at the door and to whom she gave some instructions in a low tone. The servant departed, and the count hastened to say:

"Tell me about your twin sister. Is she as lovely as you?"

"We have the same disposition."

"I would see her—but, no; she would not be you."

At this moment the servant returned bearing a letter on a silver. Madame took it, glanced at the superscription and handed it to the count.

"Commissa Rudzinski!" he exclaimed.

"I am the Countess Rudzinski," said madame quietly. "I told you in hard cash for your name and title."

"And I return it, with my love," he said. "As my wife the money is yours as well as mine."

THE KITCHEN DRESSER.

It Was Originally a Bench on Which Meat Was Dressed.

Dr. Johnson tells us that the kitchen dresser was a bench in the kitchen on which meat was dressed or prepared for table and gives the following lines in support of his view:

"Tis burnt, and so is all the meat.
What dogs are these? Where is the rascal cook?
How darest you, villain, bring it from the dresser?
And serve this to me that love it not?"—Shakespeare.

A maple dresser in her hall she had.
On which full many a slender meal she made.

Wright in his "Domestic Manners of the Middle Ages" says: "One of the great objects of ostentation in a rich man's house was his plate, which at dinner time he brought forth and spread on the table to sight of his guests. Afterward to exhibit the plate to more advantage the table was made with shelves or steps, on which the different articles could be arranged in rows, one above another. It was called in French, or Anglo-Norman, a dressoir, because on it the different articles were dressed or arranged."

It is this to which the modern poet refers:

The pewter plates on the dresser
Caught and reflected the flame as shields
Of armies the sunshine.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

The Way Two Englishmen Captured Four Hundred Prisoners.

Toward the close of the peninsular war 400 prisoners were captured by John Colborne, afterward Field Marshal Lord Seaton. Colborne, who was wounded at Talavera, had been disabled for some time, but in 1813 he was in active service again, and when Wellington's army crossed the frontier into France he performed what was indeed the most amazing feat of his career.

When riding, with no comrade but the famous Sir Henry Smith, separated from his column, he saw 400 French soldiers passing along a ravine below him. "The only way was to put a good face on the matter," he wrote. "So I went up to them, desiring them to surrender. The officer, thinking, of course, the column was behind me, surrendered his sword, saying facetiously, 'Je vous rends cette epee, qui a bien fait son devoir.' (I surrender this sword, which has done its duty well.) The 400 followed his example."

Sir Henry Smith used to declare that he had never seen such cool presence of mind as Colborne displayed on this occasion.—London Spectator.

Sanger's White Elephant.

"I was exhibiting the only white elephant ever seen in the western world," relates Lord George Sanger, in his book, "Seventy Years a Showman," "when I was honored by a visit from King Edward, then Prince of Wales. After the performance I conducted the prince through the stables and showed him all there was to see. When we came to the white elephant stall his royal highness suddenly turned to me and said, 'Sanger, is this really one of the sacred white elephants?'"

"To this I replied: 'Well, your royal highness, a showman is entitled to practice a little deception on the crowd, but I should never think of deceiving my future king. It is certainly a white elephant—in fact, a very white elephant, but only because we give him a coat of special whitewash twice a day.'"

The Backlogologist.

A Richmond negro chanced to meet on the street a friend who complained of much "misery." Indeed, the afflicted one was in despair, so "tuckered out" was he.

"What seems to be the matter?" asked the first negro.

"Jim," said the other with a moan and a gesture indicating the portion of his anatomy that was giving him so much trouble, "I's got such awful pains in mah back here."

Jim assumed an air of great solemnity and wisdom. "In dat case," said he, "dere's only one thing fo' yo' to do. Jes' yo' put yo' in de hands o' dat Doctah Blank. I hears dat he's de finest backlogologist in de whole south."—New York Press.

Buddhism.

Buddhism started with Gautama Buddha about 600 years before the Christian era, and it numbers among its adherents more than a third of the human race. Buddhism is confined mainly to Asia—Madagascar, Mongolia, Korea, Tibet, China, Japan and the large islands off the Asiatic coast. Though born in India, Buddhism is not strong in that country today, being driven out by the old Hinduism of which it is the offspring.

Distraction Needed.

Legal Customs From the Church.

When one lawyer refers to another as a "brother attorney" he employs an ancient phrase peculiar to religious and legal fraternities and suggests the close historical relation between the callings. In England for two and a half centuries after the Norman conquest all high legal offices were filled by churchmen. Laymen could not hope for advancement or for clients, and indeed the only path to the acquirement of a professional education lay through holy orders. The fraternal form of address common to the church passed naturally into legal phraseology. Brother So-and-so of the monastic order was "brother" also at the bar. So strong was popular prejudice against admitting the competency of mere laymen at law when this class began to practice, about 1300, that lay barristers adopted a black velvet skullcap or cap to conceal their lack of tonsure, the distinguishing mark of the priestly clerk. Down to our day both the form of address and the peculiar headgear have remained, although we have ceased to associate the two professions whose early intimacy was the original reason for their existence.—Green Bag.

The Swastika.

The origin and history of the curious mark known as the swastika have been exhaustively described by Dr. T. Carr, an English antiquarian. He states that the origin of the swastika dates back to pre-Christian days. Investigation has led him to believe that it was originally the symbol of polar star worship and that it was the most ancient and widely distributed symbol that had ever existed. It has been found in children among the ruins of the earlier cities of Troy, in Egypt, on the prehistoric relics of Greece, on the ruins of prehistoric American Indian mounds, in South America, on Indian relics in India, on Roman coins, on Chinese crosses in Great Britain, in Coptic churches of the tenth century and on English brasses of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. It is said to be India, Tibet, China, Korea and Japan as a sign of long life, good wishes and good fortune; it is also used by the Lapps and the Finns.

"Cutting of the Khalif."

One of the most interesting of Egyptian customs is that known as the "cutting of the Khalif," which is celebrated on the occasion of the opening of the dam of the Khalif canal, thereby causing the flooding of the land for cultivation purposes. The ceremony takes place in August, when the Nile reaches its highest level, and is really a thanksgiving service. According to tradition, the old time Egyptians had a custom of casting a young virgin girl dressed into the river as a sacrifice to the gods, but at the present time the offering takes the more humane form of a dummy. A procession of decorated boats and barges passes along the river, one special craft being used for the ceremony. This boat, rigged to represent an old time warskip, is towed by a decorated tug and is well provided with musicians, who play Arab tunes, while minute guns are fired at intervals in honor of the occasion.—Wide World Magazine.

A Revised Opinion.

A well known after-dinner speaker of New York was going home from a banquet on a surface car. At his corner he signaled the conductor to stop; but, as he swung off the platform, the car started up again, and he plowed the asphalt for ten feet with his face and figure. He struggled to his feet to see the car fading away, and a large, tired looking policeman contemplating him from the sidewalk.

"Did you see that?" demanded the victim as he limped toward the pavement.

"I did," said the policeman, "and it was your own fault."

"I didn't ask you, whose fault it was," snapped back the after-dinner speaker. "I asked you—Did you see it?"

"I did not," said the policeman.—Saturday Evening Post.

Cromwell's Spurs.

It is generally acknowledged that the most brilliant light cavalry officer Great Britain has ever produced was Oliver Cromwell. It is therefore peculiarly unfortunate, but it is nevertheless a fact, that on the statue of the Protector which stands outside Westminster hall the spurs are represented as attached to the boots upside down. Further, the left spur is on the right foot, and the right is on the left, while it is insisted by the best experts that the spurs are not of the period.—"The Bargain Book."

A Luxury.

Jim, who worked in a garage, had just declined Mr. Smith's invitation to ride in his new car.

"What's the matter, Jim?" asked Mr. Smith.

"Are you sick?"

"No, sir," he replied. "Talia! that I done los' $5, sah, an' I jes' natcherly got tuh sit an' grieve."—Success Magazine.

Mixed on the Phone.

Irritable Man (at other end of phone line)—Hello, hello! What's the matter with you? Are you forty-seven? Angry Splinter (at this end)—No; I'm not. Who said I was? I'm only thirty-three. Irritable Man—Oh, ring off!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Natural Method.

"Do you believe in the real educational methods?"

"Why not? Isn't the use of the rod the natural way to make children smart?"—Exchange.

Of all thieves fools are the worst; they rob you of time and temper.—Gelpke.

A NORWEGIAN WORD.

Origin of "Budstikken," Which Means "Spreading the News."

This peculiar word is frequently found in Scandinavian communities as the name of a newspaper, such as St. Cloud Budstikken. It is a Norwegian word, 1,200 years old at the least and has a very peculiar origin.

In those days, when the coasts of Norway were ravaged by pirates, the inhabitants had to resort to all sorts of devices to warn those at a distance of the approach of these plundering craft. When one was seen on the horizon a man went up to the top of a mountain, where he lighted a beacon fire. This could be seen for a long distance and was known to be a warning. When it was seen to the distance another fire was lighted on another hill until all over the country fires blazed from every hilltop and the people prepared to defend themselves.

They also had a system of messengers. The man who first sighted the sail would take an arrow and send it to his neighbors. From town to town this arrow was sent until all were warned. These were rather primitive ways of telegraphing, but were so of actual fact in the course of twenty-four hours all Norway knew of the approach of pirates.

This system of spreading the news was called "budstikken," and when there were no more pirates the newspapers became spreaders of the news and so were appropriately styled "budstikken."—Exchange.

WESTMINSTER HALL.

Its Bargain Counters, State Trials and Coronation Banquets.

Westminster hall, whose old gray walls have seen coronation banquets and state trials; used to echo with the bargains driven at shops or stalls which at one time fringed its walls like a modern bazaar. These were kept by booksellers, toy dealers, sempstresses and milliners. The rents and profits went by right to the warden of the fleet. An engraving of the busy scene was made by Mosely and prints taken therefrom by Gravelot before 1773 showing how—

In hall of Westminster
Sleek sempstress vendors amidst the courts her ware.

In "Tom Brown's Amusements" (1770) we read: "We enter into a great hall where we are surprised to see in the same place men on one side with hammers and toys and on the other taken up with fear of judgment. In this shop are to be sold ribbons and gloves, towers, headresses, etc. On the left hand we hear a nimble tongued painted sempstress with her charming treble invite you to buy some of her knickknacks."—London Mail.

A Fair Offer.

It was a political meeting in the east end of London, and the M. P., an exceptionally popular man, was addressing his constituents. The politician in question rejoices in a luxuriant crop of hair. The audience was sympathetic for the most part, but there was one man in the front row of the audience who made numerous interruptions. He was a coal heaver, apparently, and had but recently been leaving coals.

"Get your hair cut!" he shouted during a most pathetic passage in the candidate's speech. The well known catch phrase seemed particularly applicable, so a good many of the audience laughed.

But the M. P. was equal to the occasion.

"I will make a bargain with that gentleman," he said. "I will get my hair cut if he will get his face washed."

There were no more interruptions.—London Express.

Her Resignation.

"Papa," she said, "I am very angry with Geraldine."

"What's Geraldine done?" asked her father.

"Why, I told her a secret last summer," said the little girl indignantly, "and she has just told me she's going to tell it."

"That's very wrong of Geraldine. Has she any excuse?"

"Why, I told her it was wicked to tell a secret, and what do you think she said? She said, 'Oh, I know, but I've resigned from that secret.'"

"Papa," she concluded earnestly, "you can't resign from a secret, can you?"

The mental processes of children are past finding out.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Made Him Cautious.

Mr. White—I understand, Smathers, that your church is about to go into court to sue certain delinquent worshippers for pew rent. Brudder Smathers—Yassah, only I doesn't call folks dat won't pay de Lawd der honest debtedness worshippers. Mr. White—What do you call them? Brudder Smathers—No'm mind, sah; ne'm mind what I calls 'em. I called one of 'em what I called him in dis mawnin' and he knocked me in de head wid a rock.—National Monthly.

Shopping Up to Date.

"No, none of these hats suggest my personality at all. You see, I'm a great race goer, adore drama, read classics in the original, sympathize with the woman's movement, travel a good deal and am intensely temperamental. The hat I want must convey all this."—Satire.

Looking Forward.

Friend—Have you named the baby yet? Prond Mother—No; we must be very careful to give him a nice one, because there will be so many named after him when he becomes president.

SCRATCHING IS DANGEROUS

People afflicted with eczema and other skin troubles try to get relief by scratching, which not only aggravates the trouble, but also increases the risk of infection. Apply a little Cadum, and the itching will stop. Cadum is soothing and healing to an inflamed, irritated or diseased skin. It is antiseptic, and when applied to a scratch, sore or wound, prevents infection from disease germs. It acts quickly upon eczema, pimples, sores, ulcers, rash, rough skin, scalp sores, chafings, itching piles, etc.—Of druggists, 10c. & 25c. per box.

A HIGH GRADE CAR.

A thorough personal and comparison at the New York auto show brings the Hupmobile 32 up in the ranks of a high grade car. Touring car or torpedo, 32x3 1/2 in. tires, engine, corgator, upholstering and finish that is fine.

The car is up to date, no old style everything is nice, roomy simple, full floating axles, powerful, roomy and luxurious. It really hasn't a competitor.

GOOD SPORT SKATING.

The skating was never better about the ponds of this city and Sunday there were a great many people out. On the South Pond there were two hundred or more enjoying excellent skating, and about as many at the North Pond, while all of the ice ponds had their crowds.

On the North Pond, there was an exciting hockey match between the Young McDonough streets, and the Prickley Heats, and the former won by a score of 10 to 0.

Later in the day he learned that the missing butter had been found on Lawrence street, by Mr. Varrell who drives an ice cart for James M. Schuman, and it was returned to its owner.
